EDUCATIONAL TALKIES SHOWN AT BEE GEE

Talking pictures have invaded the classroom. Four reels, one on the molecular theory of matter, another on oxidation and reduction, and two illustrating the physics of sound, were shown Thursday afternoon in the Physical Science lecture room. They were filmed under the direction of the University of Chicago, and are intended to supplement the work of the department, not to displace the professor.

The University of Chicago plans four series of twenty lectures each in the fields of Physical, Biological, and Social Sciences and in the Humanities.

The talking picture connects visual education with the usual classroom methods. It enables, for example, the chemistry professor to supplement the theory of iron smelting with actual sound pictures of the process from a great steel works. History students will hear Washington, Hamilton, Jefferson, Cromwell and other great personalities directing the destiny of nations.

One Bee Gee student figured that the U. of C. plan of talkies will eventually cause the college faculty to be a Prexy and several janitors, but this is a wrong conception. The pictures will supplement the professors lectures, and help to impress them more firmly upon the students mind.

Lecturer Here Nov. 29 Will Speak on India

Mrs. Patricia Kendall will fill the Lecture course bill at the college on November 29. She is a prominent author and world traveler who has written the best book ever written on India and her problems.

At an early age, Mrs. Kendall spent one year in India with her father. She spent a great part of her youth at the homes of relatives in England. And thus, she was constantly thrown among English people who had known India intimately.

Having married an American engineer, Mrs. Kendall and her husband spent several years in India systematically studying the customs, religion, material resources, and problems of that land of teeming millions. She has recently made another trip to India to become familiar with the Gandhi program of reform.

Mrs. Kendall is a natural born lecturer, gifted with a facility for interesting and colorful speech that holds her hearers throughout.

Bee Gee Profs and Students Attend Meet

The Wilson Ornithological club, of which Prof. E. L. Moseley of B. G. S. C. is vice-president, is holding its annual convention at Columbus on November 25-27. The club is composed of leading bird-students of the eastern United States and others interested in this subject.

The sessions will be held in the Ohio State Museum on the O. S. U. Campus, Friday and Saturday. On Sunday a field-trip at Buckeye Lake is planned for the pleasure of the assembled bird-students. Dr. Otis and Prof. Holt, members of the organization, are planning to attend the business sessions of Friday and Saturday, while Prof. Moseley and a B. G. student who is a member will probably stay over for the field-trip, Sunday. Any interested person will be welcome.

'F' STUDENTS INCAPABLE OF EXTRA-CURRICULAR WORK, SAYS DR. MC CAIN

"A tendency to enter too many extra-curricular activities is due to lack of conscious personal direction," declared Dr. Mc Cain in an interview recently concerning the statement by Dr. C. C. Kohl which appeared in last week's Bee Gee News.

"Those students who go into too many activities are really a nuisance in said activities," she went on to say. "It is my opinion that the people who are failing in studies are also failing in extra-curricular activities."

Dr. McCain believes that the activities in question are often used as an alibi for failures, when the facts of the case show that the student is incapable of doing college work.

An "A" or "B" student, she stated, is better able to take part in dramatics than the "C" or failure student. These latter are often too indifferent to be of any value to the work.

Concerning the Annual

Word came to us from the officials of the Key that there are lacking one hundred and fifty subscriptions before the annual can become a reality. It seems to us advisable that all students who are interested in the growth of the school spirit should solicit those who have not subscribed. We must have an annual for obvious reasons. There are certainly enough loyal students to add the required number to the list. Let's get busy.

POPULARITY CONTEST VOTING TOMORROW

Tomorrow morning the ballots will be cast for the election of the most popular man and woman on Bowling Green's campus. The voting will be done in the usual place in the Ad building at the foot of the stairs.

By the unanimous vote of the Bee Gee News staff, the following have been selected as candidates for the honors: Marion Sheats, Lucile Cole, Dorothy Weaver, Vivian White, Louise McMahon, Wallace Lackey, Ford Murray, Don Stevenson, Bill Miller, Tiny Phillips, DeVore Thomas and Dick Wallace.

Winners of the contest will be announced in the next issue of the Bee Gee News. They will be given a complimentary pass to the Cla-Zel theatre for the rest of the school year; and in addition the most popular woman will have her picture in the Hall of Fame of the College Humor magazine.

There was no contest of this nature held on the Bowling Green campus last year. In 1931, the News conducted a similar contest in which Jane O'Leary and Doyt Perry, who is now studying at Ohio State University, were elected.

Holds That Students Misunderstand Library

By An Assistant

Of late there has been much adverse criticism directed toward our library. It is not the purpose of this article to discredit any criticism that has been made, but only to give the other side of the picture, that of the library's point of view.

It seems as if students are unable to realize that books are valuable. Here in our library we have many books that are out of print and as a result are highly valuable. If the librarians were to take the "chains off" as some one has suggested and let these out of print books circulate, it would not only be an injustice to the library, but also to the present and future student body. Who knows whether or not a book will be returned safely to the stacks once it leaves the doors of our library? Who knows what unforeseen accident might occur that would destroy the book? Being out of print a destroyed book would mean a total loss. Neither money nor apologies could replace the book.

As a safeguard against the loss of such valuable books the librarians have wisely prohibited them from circulating and have wisely demanded that they be used in our study hall.

It would seem that if students had a better understanding of a library and its system, there would be less adverse criticism directed in that direction.

Grades At Any Price

Now that the college honorary scholastic society has named its new members once more, it might be appropriate to make a few editorial remarks concerning grades and education.

It is lamentable, but we often need to be reminded that grades are not a measure of one's education. An "A" student has been defined by one Bee Gee professor as being a person who can adapt himself to the whims and fancies of any given teacher. The remark is too often true. But it ought not be. An "A" student should, ideally and in practice, be one who has caught the "vision of emancipation" from ignorance and has seen what real learning is.

Of course, it is a good thing to be singled out as a member of an honorary society. But we note that many "well-advised" students start their first year with "snap" courses, pile up good grades, are elected to Book and Motor, then sail along on their reputations.

Out in life, a college graduate will not be asked what his teachers thought of him. He will be judged by what he is, and "educated" is a state of being. That state demands constant vigilance, intelligence. Such cannot be graded.

And there is no label for the truly learned. They do not "belong" to anything but the intellectual aristocracy to which humanity ultimately must look for guidance.

A FACT

Gosh—what fun with boots an da gun,
on Saturday;

Rats in the pen; Fish in the pool,

Birds in the cage; All to clean out,

on Saturday;

Screens to come down; Chairs to go up,

Shop bench to straighten,

Small jobs of paint-in; All to be done,

on Saturday;

Gosh—nix on the fun; with boots and a gun

Observations from a Maverick

Sometime, some where I overheard the remark, "transient students are ephemeral and should not be allowed, they are anti-social, unappreciative, non-altruistic and look only to the time when they can tuck their newly acquired credits under their arm and wing their way back to dear old "Alma Mater".

Speaking in the robe of a transient student, I will grant the remark is true in part. I believe a transient student is critical, quick to judge, forever contrasting and comparing his new location and activities to "the good old days". Most every day so far I have been asked how I like B. G. in comparison with my former prison—and how do you think I answered them? Well I have done a little judging in the past four weeks and I will list a few of my newly formed concepts and you be the judge as to this transient student being satisfied. Also should we animals be allowed to remain.

I have observed

1. That the administration and faculty are of superior type. (Maybe I'll change my mind after the grades come out).

2. That seventy-five per cent of the pupils have a favorable attitude toward their professors. (The other 25 per cent are continually changing their minds.)

3. That there is a spirit of amiability among the student body. (That is between the co-eds and fraternity brothers.)

4. That 99 3-4 of the students are following the line of least resistance. (Men and rivers grow cooked by following the line of least resistance.)

5. In the B. G. News there is going to be a popularity contest conducted soon. The public or student body opinion is to be the judge. (I have been hearing a great deal about student opinion since I came to B. G.) This, I think is a growing popular notion. I wonder if there is any such thing I think there is student prejudice, student emotion, student greed, student stupidity, student hatred, student intolerance, but I think it is almost impossible for a large body of students to arrive at a good logical opinion based on experimental knowledge or social perspective.

(In other words "Popular notions are always wrong.") How many of you agree with me? I don't.

But now in closing I will try and be more serious. I wish to state to you charter students that we transient students are with you one hundred per cent in any activity that tends to uplift and glorify B. G. State college. We, like you, expect to pass through this school year but once, any good therefore that we can do, or any kindness that we can show to any fellow student we will do it, we will try not to defer or neglect it, for we will not pass this way again. (At least we hope not.)

Foreign Language Club Makes Plans for Winter

Following the precedent of previous years the Foreign Language Department has decided to carry out a group of interesting projects through the medium of a Foreign Language Club. This organization is comprised primarily of those students who are majoring or minoring in foreign languages. It offers ample opportunity to those who wish to enter into the language work more intimately than is possible in the formal class room.

The program committee met Thursday afternoon, November tenth, and commenced work on the programs to be presented. The meetings are to be held the first Thursday in each month at four o'clock in the afternoon in room 103 of the Administration Building.

The first program will be given Thursday afternoon, December first. The French department presents Miss Lillian Tressel in an address on the charming little province of France, Brittany. Folk songs and dances also are to be provided for further entertainment.

Problem: Where Do Co-Eds Spend Money?

If the Bowling Green co-ed is anything like the U. of Texas co-ed, she spends most of her allowance money on things not included under the head of books, tuition, and school supplies.

A survey at the U. of T. shows that 2,172 girls spent more than $8,000 a month for toilet articles and beauty shop services. They managed to scrape through on $2,200 a month for their smokes.

During the first semester of the year they spent $527,752 for clothing. This particular group required only 2,063 formals; informal dresses were much more in demand with a total of 11,728. In the hat line, they came through with 6,754; only 2,693 sweaters were needed. Two pairs of pajamas did each girl very nicely, but they averaged 14 pairs of hose apiece.

And believe it or not—72 per cent of them, now here is the shock, paid cash for all purchases!

For out of the earth we find,
Success begins with a fellow's will

But soon or late the man who wins
Is the one who thinks he can."

SHATZEL HALL'S VACATION SONG

23 days until vacation
Then we'll go to the Bee Gee Station
Back to the land of civilization
Back to daddy's door.

Back to father and mother
Back to somebody's brother
No more lessons to worry us
Until vacation is o'er.

"Hollywood Hooey"

The boys cut in Hooeywood had quite a time last Armistice Day swapping long winded stories. Among the most famous ex-soldiers is Maurice Chevalier who entered the French army early and was badly wounded at Cutry in 1914. Clive Brooks rose to the rank of a major in the English army before the guns ceased chattering. Harpo Marx was among the buck privates engaged by Uncle Sam. Bela-Dracula-Lugosi was a captain in the Hungarian army. All he had to do was give one of his famous leers!

Never, never, let me hear you report that the movies aren't educational. For you would be doing them a great injustice and we all want to be fair. As a sample of their value to humanity let me inform you that after great research work Mr. Cecil B. DeMille discovered that Nero played a fedicula while his home town went up in smoke. The instrument is a variety of lyre. As to the veracity of the story whether he played while Rome burned, that is something else again.

In case you want to know . . . Marie Dressler favors, (along with the rest of the Hollywood girls,) pajamas, the clock around . . . it's tough boys, but the Lion Man has been chosen! . . . Buster Crabbe, world champion swimmer, is the lucky, lucky lad . . . Miriam Hopkins wears a gown made of 32,000 tiny cellophane sequins in her latest flicker.

Why Not Have A Leap Year Dance?

By a Co-Ed

The time draws nigh when 1932 will be no more—and with it "Leap Year" disappears. Are we going to let the year slip by without another Leap Year Dance? The last one was more or less experimental, but who does not remember the big time that was had this spring, regardless of the fact that the Men's Gym was found unavailable at the last minute? The feminine population turned "masculine" for the night and entertained the boy friends much as the latter ordinarily do the women. The ladies, if you recall, made the date, escorted their guests to the dance, arranged the exchange of dances, and otherwise acted in masculine capacities. Various novelty dance numbers and prize features were included in the program.

Why can't we have even a bigger and better Leap Year Dance now that we have already had one and know how it works? Four years is a long time to wait for another one—and then in all probability you will have left this institution (except, possibly some of the Freshman) by that time. How about it, Upperclasmen? How about it, Freshmen?

Leave your ideas in the Bee Gee News Box underneath the postoffice boxes in the ad building. Hurry, students, the time is short!

The Flicker's Nest

Ima Goldfish. That's me. I live in the college pool. Some chap threw me in here last June, and I have almost completed my college education. You wouldn't believe how much I know. You should have seen the dignified professors with their hammers, shovels and trowels while building the walls for this pool. I watched the whole show from a nearby washtub. Some of my friends really died before it was over. You might think I lead a lonely life, but such is not the case. Nearly a hundred funny companions, and an ugly turtle live with me. His table manners are terrible. He seems always hungry, and empty down to his tail. A few sluggish clams are on the bottom of this pool. Poor fellows, they can't swim. Am glad I am a fish. You may have noticed Jeanne Harlow. She is our platinum blonde. The big, dark fellow is Wallace Beery. Ask the Supt. of Buildings and Grounds the reason for this monicker. Two bull-heads wiggle around in the bottom and keep the water dirty. Of all the putrid water. I think it is a shame. I hear that people actually pay for such water. I did better when I lived in a quarry. With all the iron I will soon have hardening of the scales. I suspect the chemistry professor of placing chemicals in the water. Wonder what for? Who is the tall Vermonter who puts river plants in here? Give me lily pads with bugs on them, every time. The bird bath is a knockout. The top leans and the water spills out. Why should a goofy bird sprinkle himself? I believe in immersion. Have you noticed the bridge? College people make me chuckle. All the fat girls who come here have romped across that bridge, trying to break it down. So far they haven't made it. Who is the good-looking music teacher who passes here so regularly? Did you ever see such doggoned Freshmen? They look at the sun-dial and tell each other that it is slow. Even a fish knows that sun time and standard time are not the same. The erect gentleman at the end of the bridge is Lief Erickson. He came to fish, but remained to visit. The reclining block under the tree puzzles me. From where I swim I can read "Nor". This means I take it, that school conditions are not what they might be overhead, and that the social committee have adopted as their password this emblem, meaning, no doubt "nobody obeys rules". On another slab is the word "al". Is that chap still running? The campus cop should attend to such things, and not waste his willowy figure chasing Austins. I heard some upperclassmen speak of "dunking" freshies. Do they think a freshman will soak up much water? Sounds like a wet idea to me. Wonder what we will happen when winter comes. One fellow behind the sumac suggested that a stick of wood be placed in the water to keep the ice from bursting the pool walls. Saw a red-haired lady in a white uniform today. She looked cold. Lots of noise out here the other day. Overheard one boy say that if we had 25 more points we would have won. I liked the band. Ding-bust the other noises, but

Competition To Be Keen in Intra-mural Games

Here's the sport you've been waiting for. The Phy. Ed. Dept. has kept the basketballs put away this year, trying to stimulate an interest in other sports. The new idea worked with reasonable success, but now the time has come for the favorite indoor sport. Entries are being received now by the intramural manager.

Competition will be keen between the class teams and various other house teams. The main idea is to be sure and have enough men so as not to forfeit any games, and be sure to appoint a unit manager of your team. A fee of 10 cents for each man entered on a team is being charged to help cover the expense of medals. This year medals are to be awarded to both the winner and the runner up. More will be published later, but the entries must be in by Tuesday, November 22. Turn in entries as soon as possible in order that the division of intramurals may work out a schedule for the season.

Ev P.—I want that car in the window.
Rusty—Well, it's in the window.

the band sounded fine. I think it helps to make a college. Wish we had more redhaired girls on the campus. We probably will have a lean year. All in all, this place is run about to suit me, although lots of the goings-on look fishy to me. They should. I'm all wet.

Intra-mural Volleyball

Well fellows—here it is, the volleyball schedule has been played through the second week and the Woolley House is still at the head of the league. Running a close second are the Ex-Hi's of Bowling Green. Some of the teams seems to be having more than their share of tough luck. This is particularly true in the case of the Callin House. These fellows have a much better team than their record indicates but just cannot get going at the critical point.

Undoubtedly the most important game remaining on the schedule is the one between the Bee Gee Ex-Hi's and the Woolley House. This game is to be played on Tuesday of next week. If it is won by the Ex-Hi's a tie for the championship will be the result, while on the other hand a victory for the Woolley House will mean almost a certain first place. Another team to be reckoned with is the "B" team from the Delhi House. These fellows are going strong after a poor start. In case of a defeat of the "Woolleyites" there would be a three way tie for first place.

Standings To Date

Who's Who and Why?

Another Junior miss, V. Marie Schmidt, is enrolled in the Who's Who. This tall brunette from Stryker is taking the Home Ec. course with a minor in Phys. Ed. although she prefers Chemistry.

In her Freshman year, she was kidded about being an argumentative young woman so she decided to make use of her talent by joining the Debate Club. She argued herself into membership in Pi Kappa Delta, the national debate fraternity, and is now on the Woman's debate team. Beware, then, of disagreeing with Marie. You might be drawn into a heated discussion (which really might be a good way to keep warm in this weather).

Marie's ambition is to be a buyer for a large firm someday. She wants to travel, too, especially to Hawaii. (Don't we all?)

Marie is a collector of Scotch jokes, among other things. Her collection is reputed to be one of the most complete in Bowling Green. As an athlete, Marie shines not at all, but as a saxophone player she's pretty good. "Saxaphobia" is her favorite musical number, and she spent more than a month learning to play it to her satisfaction.

Oh, yes! You're probably wondering what the "V" before her name stands for. It means "Virginia", but no one ever calls her that. Whatever her name, she's a likable schoolmate. Now watch her start an argument about that!

—o—

Presenting John (Handsome) Delo, a well-known Junior from Findlay. If you are not acquainted with him—stop at the S. O. S. sometime. (He can be distinguished by his dignified (?) air) John graduated from Van Buren high in '26 and after dabbling in this and that and the other for three years, decided to come to Bee Gee! Chemical engineering is the goal.

The varsity letter sported by our subject was earned in track. Among other things we hear that John is one of the uppity-ups in Butler's latest fizzle—The Harmonica club. (No, we've never heard of it, either.)

As for hobbies, John feels that they are not necessary in life and can spend his time happily "taking Don over in anything." Some favorite pastimes are dancing and card playing, being equaled in the latter only by Milton C. Work. He also likes shows—no particular kind—they all go.

Because of a thousand threats, we dare not print the G. F.'s name, but then you should know by this time. Anyway "the affair" still is—not steady or anything like that, but John still pays occasional visits (we are told) at the house.

To rush on—John's greatest regret is that he can't room with Ford Murray this year—it seems they like to wear each other's clothes. When asked what his greatest ambition was he replied: "Working in restaurants, I guess." Three cheers for our handsome waiters!

Impressions of the Philippines

The Intramuros or Walled City. Horse-shoe shaped with the muddy Pasig river on the fourth side. Across the river from the modern business district of Manila. A city within a city. Stern stone walls. Watch towers on the corners. Cannon still standing on the walls. A wide moat; now an eighteen-hole golf course. A paved street lined with palms encircles the moat. Narrow gateways covered with relief work. The royal arms of Spain.

A city of churches and schools. The great Cathedral of Manila, pompous and lavish. We attend midnight mass on Christmas Eve. An impressive ceremony but bordering on the pagan. Another church; the most beautiful of all. Constructed entirely of wood. The Saints, carved from wood. Pillars and beams of polished wood. Great panels of carved relief. Still another church, small but elaborately decorated. A jumbled art gallery. The floor of square slabs of marble. Each slab with an inscription or epitaph. We shudder to think we are literally walking over the dead.

Commoners Hold Smoker

At least sixty men participated in the fun and frolic at Commoner's House, Monday night, November 14. The evening was enjoyably whiled away by playing cards, drinking (sweet cider) and eating doughnuts.

At a late hour "all hands" piled into autos. The dormitories and sorority houses were visited and the ladies harmoniously serenaded—thanks to "uke" accompanist.

Franklin Gottfried and Mason Thompson, cooperating with the president, "Bill" Miller, handled the affair. Guests of distinction present were Wallace Lacey, Delhi president, and Drs. Clyde Hissong and W. A. Zaugg.

WHAT NOT . .

The reason politics makes strange bed-fellows is because they all like the same bunk. Los Angeles Times . . . Will Cuppy says that all modern men are descended from worm-like creatures but it shows up in some more than it does in others . . . The Golden Book's Boners says that when the Panama Canal was formally opened, Secretary Bryan asked the Swiss government to send some of its naval vessels to participate . . . Ruth Nichols gives us this to think about: The bright ones will get along without college education—it is the slow ones who need college . . . Good old Johnny Swift said, "A very little wit is valued in a woman, so we are pleased with a few words spoken plain by a parrot" . . . And Ludwig Lewisohn thinks that to speak of the horse sense of most people is to insult a noble and useful animal . . . Then the survey comes along with the story about the radio announcer's small daughter, who, when asked to say grace, said, "This food comes to us through the courtesy of Almighty God" . . .

Leaves O' Grass

WORDS

The wind scares up the pile of leaves
And blows the dust into my eyes.
So what are his promises to me?
The wind of Time has proved them lies.

That fragile vase of perfect form
Now sparkling fragments in the grass.
Thus his brittle prophecy—

The words of men are bits of glass.

A THOUGHT

Life, as it is and ever shall be
Like an ocean of many fears,
Beating, dashing and swaying,
Upon our limited lives, called years.
An unfinished dream comes sweeping,
Down upon us each and every day,
And we know, it is Life we are living,
That must last for ever and aye.
Many times we feel ourselves falling
Into space, of Beauty and Love,
Yet we find ourselves simply living,
Within the vast Glory of God.

IF YOU GRADUATE

Brighton up that dreary face
And explore life's stormy sea ;
You're bound to win the race
If you graduate from Bee Gee.

Cross a bee with a lightning bug
Or write the history of Simon McGree;
And someday you'll own a Persian rug
If you graduate from Bee Gee.

Or write a fool verse like this
And show your ignorance full and free;
But someday you'll have perfect bliss
If you graduate from Bee Gee.

Security is Comfort..

There is no security like financial independence. Poor, indeed, is the man without means when old-age or ill-health interrupts his earning capacity. Rich, indeed, is the man who can meet old-age with the confidence that a reserve fund in a bank insures. Make security doubly sure with an interest account in the Bank of Wood County.
